Dear Reader,

This term we are excited to bring you a number of essays on a wide array of topics ranging from a dissertation on medieval hagiography to an exploration of Romanian anti-Semitism during the Second World War. Continuing our drive to be more integrated with the Oxford University History Society, we have also included book reviews while the editors have put together a summary of some of the Society's lectures from Hilary Term.

As ever we encourage as many readers as possible to get involved with the journal, soon the call for submissions to the Trinity Term edition will be put out and we would welcome essays on any topic of history of historiography. Furthermore, if you have any ideas on how to improve the Journal please do not hesitate to get in touch.

Of course many thanks go out to my editors Zachary Handler, Shaina Sangha, and Aoife Miralles

I hope you enjoy reading this,

Daniel Hubbard
